

VOLUNTARY ADOPTION REGISTRY

The Idaho Voluntary Adoption Registry is a confidential cross-reference file of people who are or were the principal parties in an adoption. Certain close relatives also may be included. All persons who have filed with the Registry have indicated their wish to make their identities known to other parties involved in the adoption.

Legal authority

Adoption records are confidential; however, the Legislature has authorized the Registry to bring people together if there is mutual interest in such contact. Section 39-259A, Idaho Code, requires the State Registrar of Vital Statistics to maintain an Adoption Registry for use on a voluntary basis.

How does it work?

Those eligible to register provide identifying information, such as current name, address, and telephone number, and authorize its release. The Registry will match individuals who have authorized release of information to one another and disclose the information accordingly.

Who is eligible to register?

Adoptees who were born in Idaho and are 18 years of age or older, natural parents, and natural siblings may file identifying information. In addition, adoptive parents or grandparents of a deceased adult adoptee, and parents or grandparents of a deceased natural parent, also may register for a possible match. When filing information, applicants must specify to whom they wish to release the information.

Will any information be released if just one party registers?

No information will be released unless two qualified individuals have registered their identifying information and both have authorized its release to one another. Individuals who are eligible may register at any time. No one is required to register, and anyone may withdraw from the Registry at any time by written notice to the Registry. The law requires a search for both parents if both are listed on the original birth certificate.

Release of information

Before identifying information is released, the Registry requires individuals to provide proof of identity and their relationship to the adoptee. Examples of documents which may be required include: sworn statements, court decrees or judgments, copies of birth certificates, marriage licenses, driver's licenses, school records, voter registration cards, Social Security cards, original applications, or other evidence as may be required by the State Registrar of Vital Statistics. These documents are not required at the time of registration; registrants will be advised when documentation is required.

Counseling services

Adoptees, natural parents, and others eligible to use the Registry may wish to receive counseling services on the pros and cons of establishing contact with one another. A list of agencies that provide services on a fee basis may be obtained at no cost from the Voluntary Adoption Registry.

How does one register?

Complete both the front and back of this form according to the instructions given, sign in front of a notary public, and mail to the address provided.

Is there a fee?

An initial filing fee of $10 is required and must be submitted with the application form. No information will be filed without the notarized application form and the fee.

What about changes?

The information registered may be updated, changed, or withdrawn at any time. An update form, available from the address provided, is required to submit changes.

Does the Registry provide non-identifying information, such as medical or social background information?

The Voluntary Adoption Registry does not provide non-identifying information. People seeking this type of information should contact the person or agency that handled the adoption.

Note:

- . This registration can be accepted only if adoptee was born in Idaho.
- . Fee must be included with the application.
- . Signature must be notarized.
- . Fill out this form as completely as possible in respect to the adoptee.
